28. Description of Change: (use additional Sheets if necessary) In order for the current task of assessing Y2K compliance of ECS custom code, it is necessary to build a Discover model for OODCE (which ECS is now responsible for supporting). Access to the OODCE source code is restricted (due to licensing requirements) to a select group of developers and Patrick Berryhill needs to be added to this group in order to build the Discover model for OODCE.
29. Proposed Solution: (use additional sheets if necessary) Add 'pberryhi' to the 'oodce_dev' Unix group. Patrick Berryhill's (Attached is a copy of Larry Turner's acceptance to the source code license agreement.)
30. Alternate Solution: (use additional sheets if necessary) None
31. Consequences if Change(s) are not approved: (use additional sheets if necessary) Y2K assessment of ECS custom code will not be complete.

ABSTRACT of Software Source Code License Agreement
With Hewlett-Packard Company

This Abstract contains all terms and conditions binding upon personnel having access to the Program.

- 1.1 "Program" shall mean the HP software program, in source and object code forms, listed and described in Exhibit A. [I'll provide hardcopy Exhibit to Evelyn].
- 1.2 "Documentation" shall mean the documentation provided with the Program listed in Exhibit A.
- 2.1 May Use and modify the source code solely for purpose of development, support and maintenance, and porting.
- 2.2 Have right to compile Program source code into object code; and to use, reproduce, disclose and distribute the Program object code to end-users solely in conjunction with any Raytheon hardware or software "products"
- 2.3 May use Documentation provided with the Program(s) solely in conjunction with 2.1 and 2.2, above.
- 2.4 No right to copy all or part of Program or Documentation, or to disclose or distribute all or any part of Program or Documentation to any third party. No rights with respect to Program and Documentation unless specifically set forth in the License Agreement.
- 2.5 All copies made of Program and Documentation, and modifications of derivative works should include H-P Proprietary notice.
- 2.8
 - (a) Shall store and maintain Program source code and documentation in a secured environment and location, and permit access only to "authorized personnel".
 - (b) Shall store and maintain unbundled Program object code and any unbundled object code derived from Program object code in manner consistent with Raytheon method for storing Raytheon-produced unbundled object code.
 - (c) Documentation of object code shall include notices re proprietary nature of the documentation (as well as any applicable copyrights).
- 9.1 All Program source code, business information with respect to any unannounced HP products, is deemed "Confidential Information"...Receiving party shall protect any such Confidential Information from unauthorized disclosure to third parties with the same degree of care as party uses for its own similar information for a period of three (3) years from date of disclosure [obligation of non-disclosure of Program source code shall be perpetual]
